

27 The tensile strength of graphene is much greater than steel.

Which structural feature of graphene is responsible for its high tensile strength?

- A Graphene contains a network of covalent bonds.
- B Graphene contains delocalised electrons.
- C Graphene has a structure that is one atom thick.
- D The bond angles in graphene are all equal.